

Supporting Your Child's IEP

If you have a child receiving special education services, you know making sure they have the resources and supports necessary to succeed does not stop in the summer months. Many of you may even be experienced with Individualized Education Programs (IEPs) – but did you know they can be supported by an IAble account? Get ready to learn!

Let's start with the basics. An IEP lays out the special education services and supports a student will need to thrive in school. An IAble account helps individuals with a disability and their support systems save money without jeopardizing their eligibility for assistance programs. Money in an IAble account can be used for any expense related to the account owner's disability, which are also known as qualified disability expenses (QDEs). This is where the two concepts meet.

A variety of services and supports included in your student's IEP may be covered with an IAble account if they meet the definition of a qualified disability-related expense. Some examples might include, but are not limited to:

Tutor

Pencil grips or special paper

Speech-language therapy

Occupational therapy

Physical therapy

Talking calculator

Reading guides

Text-to-speech software

Noise cancelling headphones

Audiobooks

Personal listening device

Slant boards

As you meet with your child's education support system, keep IAble in the forefront of your mind. It can help you save for the necessary expenses that support your child's IEP.

Explore the links below to learn more.

More on QDEs

More on IEPs